What is truly exciting right now in the flower industry is the increasing variety of plant material that is available in the flower markets. More and more floral designers are adding to that by using their own grown flora or seeking out elements from the wild.

For many, this is to minimize costs, but for others it is the discovery that there are a wealth of free possibilities in Nature that create unique and exciting pieces. An example of this is the trend to using Dandelion seed heads picked from Summer meadows (in last month's magazine) but there are so many more.

With this in mind, as you work through the wonderful wedding bouquets featured in this very special edition keep an eye out for the many possibilities using found plant materials

Have fun!
Happy arranging
